Executive Leadership

Executive Leaders take more of a controlled and systematic approach to work. They have an increased level of self-awareness and the capacity to hold more perspectives

Our Executive Leadership program delves into the personal and professional competence of each individual and provides the opportunity to understand one's own inventory of skills, behaviours, capability, and capacity.

This program commences with an opportunity to discover personal strengths and areas of improvement and to also consider how to differentiate yourself from others. Truly knowing who you are and lifting your level of self-awareness will allow participants to then consider how they influence others and manage their workplace relationships.

The program aims to take the more senior leader on a journey to build their influencing skills, embed critical thinking techniques and coach their team members to use them, manage business risk, build an innovative work environment, and embrace diversity within their team and the entire workplace.
