Design Principles & Financial Considerations in a Deregulated Aged Care Sector

Are you looking to refurbish or redevelop your facility?

The Australian Government has made recent changes to residential aged care, with the deregulation of bed licensing restrictions. As the residential aged care sector moves into a competitive marketplace, providers need to start considering their competitive advantages. A new residential aged care system without 'bed licenses' will commence in 2024. This means that competitors can enter any marketplace at any time and compete with your business. If your accommodation is not up to standard, your facility's occupancy could be impacted which means your profitability will be certainly affected.

So, what do you need to consider and do to be prepared for this new marketplace?

This session is jointly hosted by CareCFO and O'Neill Architecture, a Brisbane based architectural firm who has undertaken several efficient design initiatives for some of Australia's largest providers. During this session, you will get insights into design efficiencies, building initiatives that appeal to consumers and outbreak management design strategies, as well as financial modelling and development funding options.
